United Nations Study on Violence against Children

Response to the questionnaire received from the Government of the Republic of GUYANA
1. LEGAL FRAMEWORK

International human rights instruments

Answer to Question 1 – In recognition of the conditions and the mandate of the international convention on the Rights of the Child there has been heightened activity in the area of public education to raise the level of awareness of children at risk for child abuse, and the training of frontline workers to be more effective when dealing with reported cases. Efforts were also made by the Local Convention on the Rights of the Child Commission, established by the Guyana Government in March 1992, to sensitize school children of their rights and responsibilities. These combined efforts resulted in increased reporting of child abuse cases. This necessitated a revisiting of the child protection laws and the entire child protection system in Guyana. This system is currently engaging the attention of the Ministry of Labour, Human Services & Social Security.

The summary Jurisdiction (Offences) Act, Chapter 83:02 in the Laws of Guyana stipulates conditions and penalties for the ill-treatment and neglect of a child, but the penalties are outdated and does not provide for the removal from an abusive home or for the treatment of the perpetrator. Subsequently, in 1996 the Domestic Violence act was enacted. This Act legislates against all forms of domestic violence and provides civil remedies such as protection, occupation and tenancy orders. This act provides for the removal of an abuser from the home when deemed necessary. The Police could make application for a protection order, or a registered social worker could do so on behalf of a minor. There is also provision for counseling of the victim and the perpetrator. The Domestic Violence Act is a major piece of legislation in the context of abuse of children, but its implementation is still not satisfactory.

Legal provisions on violence against children

Answer to Question 2 - Perpetrators of violence against children are liable for prosecution under the Laws of Guyana as stated above. The Police respond to reports and take matters to courts. Intervention by social workers is primarily focused on stopping the abuse and protecting the child from harm by educating, counselling and promoting behaviour change in the abuser and if possible finding alternative living accommodation for the child. A professional social worker whose name was gazetted for such a purpose can take a matter to court on behalf of a child under the Domestic Violence Act.

Answer to Question 3 was addressed at 1 & 2.

Answer to Question 4 - The Domestic Violence Act is of major importance in addressing all form of abuse violence to and sexual exploitation of children, which take place in the home and within the family unit. In addition there are a number of Commissions and Committees established to improve the life of a child.

Answer to Question 5 – The Education Act caters for Corporal punishment in schools and is an option of parents also.

Answer to Question 6 – The juvenile justice system is rehabilitative rather than punitive. Corporal punishment and capital punishment are not sentences for persons under 18 year.

Answers to Question 7 – Some aspect of these are addressed in the Domestic Violence Act.

Answer to Question 8 – These are not part of the Guyanese culture

Answer to Question 9 - All children in Guyana are treated the same in respect to child abuse and violence against children.

Answer to Question 10 - There is no charge for rape of a male child in the Laws of Guyana. New Sexual offenses laws are being drafted and will cater for this.

Answer to Question 11 – An Act to be cited as the Children Act 2002 is awaiting review for enactment by Parliament. This is an Act to reform the laws relating to children, to make provision for the regulation of child minding and child care services and the operation of voluntary homes and to repeal certain enactments.

Answer to Question 12 –

a) Child Labour – a rapid assessment study in identified areas where children were engaged in employment for the specific purpose of programme planning and legislation for the elimination of child labour in Guyana.

b) Children & Violence Project – A research to determine the extent to which children have been affected by violence both in the home an in the wider community and the development of peace education and conflict resolution interventions with children and their families together with the establishment of a National Monitoring & Evaluation system.
c) A survey of the number and conditions of Orphans & Vulnerable children for effective treatment, monitoring & evaluation.

Court tasked with addressing violence against children

Answer to Question 13 – There is no special Court to deal with family matters or violence against children. There are plans to establish a Family Court in the near future.

Minimum age for sexual activity

Answer to Question 14 - The Criminal Law offences Act sets out the age for valid consent to sexual activity for girls (only) as 13 years. Homosexual activity (buggery) is prohibited under the same Act. (Public consultations are at present ongoing about raising the age of consent for both boys and girls.)

Answer to Question 15 - The minimum age of marriage for women & men is sixteen (16) with parental consent and eighteen (18) without.

Answer to Question 17 - This is currently being addressed

Answer to Question 18 - This is currently being addressed

Reporting obligations relating to violence against children

Answer to Question 19 - There is no legislative compulsory reporting for child abuse or acts of violence against children, but every citizen is expected to speak out when they suspect something is not right with a child. Persons are encouraged report to the Police, The Probation & Family Welfare Service or any welfare agency that provides services for children.

Complaints procedures

Answer to Question 20 –There is no strict complaint procedure for reporting violence against children. When violence is perpetrated against a child, any concerned person – a parent, neighbour, teacher, caregiver or other members of society can make a complaint. Reports can be made to the Police, who investigate with the intent to prosecute or to Probation & Family Welfare Service where intervention is done to stop the abuse or violence. There is extensive collaboration between the Police and Probation & Family Welfare Service for effective intervention.

Reports are also taken by Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) such as the Red Thread, Help & Shelter, St. Francis Community Developers and the National Commission on the Rights of the Child.

Answer to Question 21 - Legal Aid is available, but the legal officers assess cases for merit of involvement. Social Workers can act on behalf of a child under the Domestic Violence Act.

Answer to Question 22 – There has been ongoing public awareness programmes through the print and electronic media as well as educational workshops and seminars on the Convention of the Rights of the Child and on all forms of violence against children. There has also been special training for teachers and caregivers to identify when a child is at risk and what to do about it.

Answer to Question 23 - A medical practitioner must examine the child victim and issue a medical certificate on a prescribed law enforcement form. This form is preserved as court evidence. In the case of sexual abuse, children who are the alleged victims are allowed to testify but it is up to the court to decide whether the child can give sworn testimony or not. The court case must be done “in camera.”

Answer to Question 24 – Complaints of violence against children are promptly investigated. Methods of intervention and outcome are largely based on the findings of the investigating officers. Intervention may take the form of punishment of perpetrator through court proceedings, family therapy and counseling of the perpetrator by the P&FWS and NGOs that offer a service to children.

Answer to Question 25 – Children and juveniles found guilty of perpetrating violence may be placed by a Magistrate under a period of statutory supervision by the Probation & Family Welfare Service or may be committed to the juvenile correctional institution (New Opportunity Corps). There is also provision in the juvenile offenders Act for the parents of the children to be fined.
