WHAT IS THE HUMAN RIGHTS COUNCIL?

The UN Human Rights Council (Council or HRC) is the principle intergovernmental body within the United Nations (UN) system responsible for strengthening the promotion and protection of human rights around the globe, and for addressing and taking action on human rights violations around the globe.

The Council holds meetings throughout the year providing a multilateral forum to address human rights violations wherever and whenever they occur. It responds to human rights emergencies and makes recommendations on how to better implement human rights on the ground. The Council has the ability to discuss all thematic human rights issues and country-specific situations that require its attention.

The Council held its first session in June 2006. One year later, the Council adopted its “Institution-Building” package by resolution 5/1 to guide its work and set up its procedures and mechanisms. Among the Council’s subsidiary bodies are the Universal Periodic Review mechanism (UPR), the Special Procedures, the Advisory Committee and the Complaint Procedure.

The Council can also establish international commissions of inquiry and fact-finding missions investigating and responding to human rights violations, to help expose violators and bring them to justice.

The Human Rights Council meets for at least 10 weeks per year at the United Nations Office in Geneva, Switzerland, in regular sessions usually taking place in March, June and September. The Council can also convene urgent meetings on short notice to respond to emerging human rights crises – 28 such special sessions were held thus far. The Council’s subsidiary bodies meet for approximately 20 additional weeks each year. Since its 1st session in 2006, the Council’s agenda has been expanding and its meeting time has more than doubled.

The Council is made up of 47 member States who are elected by the UN General Assembly by a simple majority vote, through a secret ballot. Members of the Council are elected for three-year terms with one-third of the members being renewed each year. Council membership is based on equitable geographical distribution of seats according to the following regional breakdown: 13 African States; 13 Asia-Pacific States; 8 Latin American and Caribbean States; 7 Western European and other States; 6 Eastern European States. 114 countries have served as Council members so far, reflecting the UN’s diversity giving it legitimacy when speaking out on human rights violations in all countries.

The Council has a Bureau which consists of a president and four vice-presidents who represent each of the five regional groups, and who serve for a year in accordance with the Council’s annual cycle (January – December). Staff from the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) serve as the secretariat for the Council providing its members with technical, substantive and administrative support. In addition to the member States of the Council, observers, which include non-member States, intergovernmental organizations, national human rights institutions, and non-governmental organizations (NGOs), also participate actively in Council sessions.

The Council can adopt texts with or without a recorded vote. To adopt a draft text by a vote, it must enjoy the support of a majority of the members of the Council. Only Council members are able to vote. The decisions of the Council are not legally binding. To date the Council adopted over 1,600 texts to address a wide range of thematic and country-specific human rights issues.

HUMAN RIGHTS COUNCIL MEMBERSHIP ACROSS THE GLOBE (2006-2019)*

The boundaries shown, the designations used and the presentation of material on this map do not imply any opinion, official endorsement or acceptance by the United Nations.
The Human Rights Council’s Universal Periodic Review (UPR) is a unique process which involves a review of the human rights records of all 193 UN member States once every 4.5 years. The UPR is one of the most innovative and powerful achievements of the Council designed to ensure equal treatment for every country when their human rights situations are assessed. It provides the opportunity for each State to declare what actions they have taken to improve the human rights situation in their countries and to fulfil their human rights obligations, as well as the challenges and constraints they are facing in so doing.

During UPR Working Group meetings held three times per year, UN member States spell out positive achievements, express concerns and ultimately pose recommendations to the States under review. Each year 42 States are reviewed, receiving an average of 180 recommendations each. Reviewed States are then expected to indicate which recommendations they support, and to report on measures and steps taken to implement them, which on average are 75% of all the recommendations made. Moreover, the UPR also provides a space for States to request technical assistance from other States to enhance their capacity to deal effectively with challenges and for them to share best practices.

The ultimate aim of this process is to improve concretely the human rights situation in all countries with significant consequences for people around the globe and address human rights violations wherever they occur.

Since the UPR began functioning in 2008, there has been 100% participation by all 193 UN member States. The 3rd cycle of reviewing the human rights records of each country commenced in 2017.
The Human Rights Council’s Special Procedures mandate holders are made up of special rapporteurs, independent experts or working groups composed of five members who are appointed by the Council and who serve in their personal capacity.

Special procedures undertake country visits; act on individual cases and concerns of a broader, structural nature by sending communications to States and other actors bringing alleged violations or abuses to their attention; conduct thematic studies and convene expert consultations; contribute to the development of international human rights standards; engage in advocacy; raise public awareness; and provide advice for technical cooperation.

These independent experts report at least once a year to the Council on their findings and recommendations, as well as to the UN General Assembly. At times they are the only mechanism alerting the international community to certain human rights issues.

Currently there are 80 active Special Procedures mandate holders for 56 mandates - 44 thematic mandates, such as water and sanitation, arbitrary detention, the rights of migrants, violence against women, torture and human trafficking, and 12 country-specific mandates.
The Human Rights Council’s Advisory Committee functions as the “think-tank” of the Council focusing mainly on studies and research-based advice. It consists of 18 independent experts that are elected by the Council and are drawn proportionally from the five UN regional groups. The experts are from different professional backgrounds, all serve in their personal capacity for three-year terms and are eligible for re-election only once.

The Advisory Committee held its first meeting in 2008. It meets twice a year, in February and August, for one week each.

The Advisory Committee is implementation-oriented, has produced studies on a wide range of thematic issues including vulture funds, corruption, local government, post-disaster and post-conflict situations, terrorist hostage-taking, the right to food, missing persons, the rights of persons living with albinism, and promoting human rights through sport and the Olympic ideal, among others. The Advisory Committee has also formulated draft declarations as well as principles and guidelines on a number of topics, some of which were endorsed by the General Assembly. These include the principles and guidelines for the elimination of discrimination against persons affected by leprosy and their family members.
The Human Rights Council’s Complaint Procedure is a victims’-oriented process addressing consistent patterns of gross and reliably attested human rights violations occurring in any part of the world and under any circumstances. The Complaint Procedure is based on communications received from individuals, groups or non-governmental organizations that claim to be victims of human rights violations or that have direct, reliable knowledge of such violations.

The Complaint Procedure was established in 2007 out of the need to improve the previous 1503 procedure through increasing impartiality, objectivity, efficiency and victim-orientation.

Two distinct working groups — the Working Group on Communications and the Working Group on Situations — are responsible, respectively, for examining communications and bringing violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms to the Council’s attention, for their further action. The Council examines reports and any situation placed before it by the Working Group on Situations in a confidential manner (unless it decides otherwise), with a view to enhance cooperation with the State concerned. It does so as frequently as needed, but at least once a year.

This is the only universal complaint procedure covering all human rights and fundamental freedoms in all UN member States. An average of 3,400 communications are submitted to the Complaint Procedure each year.
The Human Rights Council can also establish international commissions of inquiries, fact-finding missions and investigations to respond to serious violations of international human rights and humanitarian law, whether protracted or resulting from sudden events, and to promote accountability for such violations and counter impunity.

The Commissions of inquiries and fact-finding missions produce hard-hitting evidence on war crimes and crimes against humanity, feeding into formal justice processes to hold violators accountable.

These investigative bodies are supported by OHCHR staff who provide administrative, logistical as well as security support and expertise, and carry out missions as mandated. To date 29 such commissions and missions have been created by the Council with 7 currently active.

The Forum on Minority Issues has been established to provide a platform for promoting dialogue and cooperation on issues pertaining to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities, as well as to provide thematic contributions and expertise to the work of the Special Rapporteur on Minority Issues. The Forum identifies and analyses best practices, challenges, opportunities and initiatives for the further implementation of the Declaration on the Rights of Persons Belonging to National or Ethnic, Religious and Linguistic Minorities.

The Forum meets annually for two working days allocated to thematic discussions with a Chairperson appointed by the President of the Human Rights Council on the basis of regional rotation, and in consultation with regional groups. The Special Rapporteur on Minority Issues guides the work of the Forum, prepares its annual meetings and reports on the thematic recommendations of the Forum to the Council.

The Forum is open to all relevant stakeholder groups, including States, the wider UN system, intergovernmental and regional organizations, national human rights institutions, non-governmental organizations and affected stakeholders, among others.

EXPERT MECHANISM ON THE RIGHTS OF INDIGENOUS PEOPLES

The Expert Mechanism on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples provides the Human Rights Council with thematic advice in the form of studies and research on the rights of Indigenous peoples as directed by the Council. Its studies have covered issues such as education, the right to participation in decision making processes, access to justice, the role of language, cultures and the identity of indigenous peoples, among others.

The Expert Mechanism may also suggest proposals to the Council for its consideration and approval, and can highlight good practices. Moreover, the Expert Mechanism may also provide member States upon request assistance and technical advice regarding the development of domestic policies relating to the rights of indigenous peoples, as well as the implementation of recommendations.

The Expert Mechanism is made up of seven independent experts based on equitable geographical distribution and gender balance, who are appointed by the Council for 3 year terms. It holds one annual session, usually in July, with the participation of a wide range of stakeholders, whose participation is also strengthened through the Voluntary Fund for Indigenous Populations. The Expert Mechanism reports to the Council once a year and produces an annual study on the status on the rights of indigenous peoples worldwide.

FORUM ON BUSINESS AND HUMAN RIGHTS

The Forum on Business and Human Rights has been established by the Human Rights Council and – under the guidance of the Working Group on the issue of human rights and transnational corporations and other business enterprises – discusses trends and challenges in the implementation of the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights. It promotes dialogue and cooperation on issues linked to business and human rights, including challenges faced in particular sectors, operational environments or in relation to specific rights or groups. It also identifies good practices.

As per Council resolution 17/4, the Forum is open to all relevant stakeholder groups, including States, the wider UN system, intergovernmental and regional organizations, businesses, labour unions, national human rights institutions, non-governmental organizations and affected stakeholders, among others.
SOCIAL FORUM

The Social Forum is an annual three-day meeting convened by the Human Rights Council. It is defined as a unique space for open and interactive dialogue between civil society actors, representatives of member States, and intergovernmental organizations, on a theme chosen by the Council each year.

The Social Forum has addressed issues such as the eradication of poverty and the social dimension of the globalization process, the impacts of economic and financial crises on efforts to combat poverty, the adverse effects of climate change on human rights, the promotion of the right to development, the rights of older persons, access to medicines and the rights of persons with disabilities, among others.

The reports produced by the Social Forum are submitted to the Council for further consideration.

FORUM ON HUMAN RIGHTS, DEMOCRACY AND RULE OF LAW

The Forum on Human Rights, Democracy and Rule of Law is the latest subsidiary body established by the Human Rights Council. The purpose of the Forum is to provide a platform for promoting dialogue and cooperation on issues pertaining to the relationship between these areas and to identify and analyse best practices, challenges and opportunities for States in their efforts to secure respect for human rights, democracy and the rule of law.

The Forum meets biannually for 2 working days. The President of the Council appoints for each session, on the basis of regional rotation and in consultation with regional groups, a Chairperson of the Forum from candidates nominated by members and observers of the Council.
