The destruction of the Amazon is a concern of global relevance. Deforestation is not the only threat to this region: hundreds of dams have been constructed and planned, and mining activities for petroleum and iron extraction continue to expand despite the global call for climate justice.

Not only States but also business actors play a significant role and have responsibilities. In this context, we will discuss how the future treaty can contribute to prevent impunity and to establish standards of civil, criminal and administrative liability for companies, as well as effective sanctions and redress measures.

Speakers

Carolina de Moura Campos
Association Jangada Brumadinho
Brazil

Alex Villca
Coordinadora para la Defensa de la Amazonía
Bolivia

Bilio Alveiro Bolaños Marin
Unidad Indígena del Pueblo Awá
Colombia

Olivier de Schutter
Professor of International Law
Belgium

Moderation

Maria Isabel Cubides
International Federation for Human Rights