Ситуации в области прав человека, требующие внимания со стороны Совета*Доклад Специального докладчика по вопросу о положении в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике
Мирзуки Дарусмана*Резюме*

В своем заявлении в Третьем комитете Генеральной Ассамблеи в ноябре 2012 года Специальный докладчик по вопросу о положении в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике призвал государства-члены и международное сообщество провести всеобъемлющий обзор многочисленных докладов о положении в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, представленных по линии его мандата, а также Генеральным секретарем за последние восемь лет, с целью оценки основных закономерностей и тенденций, а также рассмотреть вопрос о создании более детального механизма по расследованию. Настоящий доклад содержит всесторонний обзор документов и резолюций Организации Объединенных Наций о положении в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике с 2004 года.

Помимо обзора в общей сложности 22 докладов Генерального секретаря и Специального докладчика по вопросу о положении в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, представленных с 2004 года, и 16 резолюций Генеральной Ассамблеи и ее вспомогательных органов, доклад отражает попытку охватить документацию, связанную с универсальным периодическим обзором, заключительные замечания договорных органов по правам человека и мнения, принятые Рабочей группой по произвольным задержаниям и Рабочей группой по насильственным или недобровольным исчезновениям по делам, затрагивающим Корейскую Народно-Демократическую Республику, в этот период. Обзор позволил выявить девять наиболее характерных типов нарушений, о которых шла речь в этих документах. Более подробный анализ этих типов нарушений содержится в приложении I к докладу.

В заключение в докладе представлены рекомендации для международного сообщества, в том числе предложения о некоторых возможных последующих мерах и приоритетных направлениях действий Организации Объединенных Наций по вопросу о положении в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике. В докладе содержится призыв к созданию механизма для расследования положения в стране, обладающего адекватными ресурсами для расследования и документирования серьезных, систематических и широкомасштабных нарушений прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике и представления докладов Совету по правам человека и Генеральной Ассамблее, с тем чтобы рассмотреть вопрос об ответственности за такие нарушения, а также преступления против человечности.

I. Введение

1. Мандат Специального докладчика по вопросу о положении в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике был создан Комиссией по правам человека в соответствии с резолюцией 2004/13, и с тех пор его действие ежегодно продлевалось. Согласно вышеуказанной резолюции и последующим резолюциям Генеральной Ассамблеи Специальный докладчик представляет два доклада в год: один – Совету по правам человека и другой – Генеральной Ассамблее. В своем последнем докладе Генеральной Ассамблее (A/67/370) Специальный докладчик дал обзор современной ситуации в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике и озабоченностей, связанных с нарушениями этих прав, включая ограничения на свободу убеждений и их свободное выражение, экономические положения и его влияние на экономические, социальные и культурные права, озабоченности в связи с правом на защиту просителей убежища из Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики и в связи с торговлей людьми. 2 ноября 2012 года в своем выступлении в Третьем комитете Генеральной Ассамблеи Специальный докладчик также выразил свою сохраняющуюся тревогу по поводу похищений иностранных и японских граждан, судьба которых, к сожалению, так и остается невыясненной.

2. В своем заявлении Специальный докладчик призвал государства-члены и международное сообщество провести всеобъемлющий обзор многочисленных докладов о положении в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, представленных в рамках его мандата и Генеральным секретарем за последние годы, с целью оценки основных закономерностей и тенденций, а также рассмотреть вопрос о создании более детального механизма по расследованию. Настоящий доклад содержит всеобъемлющий обзор документации и резолюций Организации Объединенных Наций о положении в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике с 2004 года. В докладе делается попытка подвести итоги и оценить, насколько полно органы Организации Объединенных Наций задокументировали нарушения прав человека, происходящие в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, с момента учреждения мандата Специального докладчика в 2004 году¹. В докладе предлагается ряд возможных последующих мер и приоритетных направлений действий Организации Объединенных Наций по правам человека в этой стране.

3. Обзор охватывает не менее 60 документов о правах человека, в том числе доклады Генерального секретаря Генеральной Ассамблее; доклады Специального докладчика Генеральной Ассамблее и Совету по правам человека и его предшественнице – Комиссии по правам человека; резолюции, принятые этими межправительственными органами; различные доклады по линии универсального периодического обзора Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики

Советом по правам человека; заключительные замечания и доклады государства в различные договорные органы, а именно: Комитет по правам человека, Комитет по экономическим, социальным и культурным правам, Комитет по ликвидации дискриминации в отношении женщин, Комитет по правам ребенка; и документацию по делам, которыми занимались мандатарии специальных процедур Совета в области прав человека, включая Рабочую группу по произвольным задержаниям и Рабочую группу по насильственным и недобровольным исчезновениям; относительно положения в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике².

4. Более подробный анализ типов нарушений прав человека, задокументированных Организацией Объединенных Наций в своих докладах и резолюциях, принятых с 2004 года, приводится в приложении I.

II. Типы нарушений, установленные Организацией Объединенных Наций

5. С 2003 года Генеральная Ассамблея и ее вспомогательные органы приняли 16 резолюций³. С 2004 года Генеральный секретарь и Специальный докладчик представили в общей сложности 22 доклада государствам – членам Организации Объединенных Наций. В этих документах подчеркиваются длительный характер и большие масштабы серьезных нарушений прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, а также осознание этого Организацией Объединенных Наций и ее государствами-членами.

6. Обзор этой документации позволяет выявить девять ключевых взаимосвязанных проблем или типов нарушений прав человека, которым Организация Объединенных Наций уделяет особое внимание:

a) нарушение права на питание, в частности последствия политики распределения продовольствия под контролем государства для положения в области питания и здоровья населения и воздействие ограничений на доставку международной гуманитарной помощи для борьбы с повсеместным продовольственным кризисом;

b) пытки и другие жестокие, бесчеловечные или унижающие достоинство виды обращения и наказания, в том числе бесчеловечные условия заключения;

c) произвольные задержания как форма преследований и криминализация любых действий, которые считаются противоречащими или несоответствующими официальной государственной идеологии, отсутствие законности и надлежащих процессуальных гарантий или независимой судебной системы;

d) нарушения прав человека связанные с тюремными лагерями;

² Обзор не охватывает доклады отделений Организации Объединенных Наций и специализированных учреждений, таких как Управление по координации гуманитарных вопросов (УКГВ), Мировая продовольственная программа (МПП), Продовольственная и сельскохозяйственная организация Объединенных Наций (ФАО) и т.д.

e) дискриминация и чрезмерное или особое воздействие нарушений прав человека на уязвимые группы, в частности женщин, детей, инвалидов и репатриантов. Особую озабоченность вызывает тот факт, что общество разделено на три отдельные группы по признаку политической лояльности к власти. Место человека в этой иерархии определяет уровень доступа, который предоставляется ему к пользованию основными правами человека, в том числе доступа к продуктам питания, здравоохранению, образованию и свободе передвижения;

f) широкомасштабное нарушение свободы слова и других связанных с этим свобод;

g) нарушение права на жизнь, в частности злонамеренное применение смертной казни и практика публичных казней;

h) ограничения на свободу передвижения и жестокое обращение с принудительно возвращенными гражданами;

i) насильственные исчезновения, в том числе в виде похищения иностранных граждан.

7. Эти девять категорий были выявлены в ходе обзора проблем, по поводу которых Организация Объединенных Наций выражала особую озабоченность, и они говорят о наличии систематической и широко распространенной практики нарушений прав человека. Полное описание документов, свидетельствующих о существовании этих девяти типов нарушений, представлено в приложении I к докладу. По каждой из этих категорий нарушений имеется различный объем документации, так как собрать информацию достаточно сложно из-за отсутствия независимых наблюдателей и средств массовой информации в стране, ограничений на выезд граждан из страны и отказа правительства Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики обеспечить доступ или иным образом сотрудничать с механизмами Организации Объединенных Наций в области прав человека. Озабоченность по поводу репрессий, в том числе в отношении остающихся в стране членов семьи, также препятствует разглашению информации конкретными жертвами нарушений или получению их согласия на обнародование определенных сведений. Тем не менее регулярность, достоверность и непротиворечивость полученной информации – равно как и закономерности, на которые она указывает, – заставляют говорить о необходимости более систематического, комплексного и обеспеченного ресурсами механизма, чем тот, который может быть обеспечен нынешним Специальным докладчиком и его предусмотренной мандатом поддержкой со стороны Управления Верховного комиссара по правам человека. Механизм расследования позволил бы получить более полную картину положения в стране, дать количественную и качественную оценку нарушений через призму международного права, возложить ответственность на конкретных субъектов или виновников этих нарушений и предложить эффективный курс международных действий.

III. Оценка Организацией Объединенных Наций нарушений прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике

8. Организация Объединенных Наций квалифицировала многие из нарушений в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике как серьезные нарушения прав человека, совершаемые на систематической и широко распространенной основе.

9. Генеральная Ассамблея в своих резолюциях по Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, принятых с 2006 по 2012 год, неоднократно выражала серьезную обеспокоенность в связи с продолжающими поступать сообщениями о систематических, широко распространенных и грубых нарушениях гражданских, политических, экономических, социальных и культурных прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, в том числе пытках, казнях, произвольных задержаниях, несоблюдении процессуальных гарантий и законности, вынесении смертных приговоров по политическим и религиозным мотивам, коллективных наказаниях и наличии большого числа тюремных лагерей и широкого использования принудительного труда. Начиная с 2008 года Генеральная Ассамблея ужесточила свою позицию и начала выражать крайне серьезную обеспокоенность по поводу этих нарушений.

10. В своих резолюциях Генеральная Ассамблея также выражала очень серьезную обеспокоенность по поводу нарушений экономических и социальных прав, которые приводят к возникновению острых форм недоедания и других проблем в области здравоохранения, а также ограничения свободы передвижения, носящего систематический и широкомасштабный характер. Кроме того, Генеральная Ассамблея осудила нарушения, затрагивающие уязвимые группы населения, в частности женщин, детей, инвалидов и граждан, репатриированных в Корейскую Народно-Демократическую Республику. Комиссия по правам человека также выражала эти озабоченности в своих резолюциях, принятых с 2004 года⁴.

11. С 2009 года Совет по правам человека выражал сожаление по поводу серьезных, широко распространенных и систематических нарушений прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, в частности применения пыток и трудовых лагерей для политических заключенных и репатриированных граждан страны. В 2012 году Совет по правам человека пошел еще дальше, выразив глубокую озабоченность по поводу "постоянного ухудшения" положения в области прав человека в стране⁵.

12. В 2012 году впервые с момента учреждения мандата Специального докладчика Совет по правам человека принял резолюцию по Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике без голосования, что стало свидетельством обеспокоенности подавляющего и постоянно растущего числа стран положением в области прав человека в стране⁶. Генеральная Ассамблея 20 декабря 2012 года

⁴ Резолюции 2004/13 и 2005/11 Комиссии по правам человека.

⁵ Резолюция 19/13 Совета по правам человека.

также впервые приняла резолюцию по Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике без голосования, выразив свою глубокую озабоченность в связи со значительным устойчивым ухудшением положения в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, несмотря на смену руководства⁷.

13. Оба специальных докладчика, которым был поручен этот мандат, признали систематический характер нарушений прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике. В 2012 году в своем докладе Генеральной Ассамблее Специальный докладчик "был обескуражен недавним заявлением Ким Чен Ына относительно того, что укрепление вооруженных сил занимает первое, второе и третье место в списке его приоритетных задач", и отметил, что "медленные темпы экономического роста в сочетании с политикой "приоритета армии" будут иметь пагубные последствия для благосостояния народа Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики"⁸. Бывший Специальный докладчик выражал аналогичные обеспокоенности. В 2005 году он подчеркнул, что "недемократический характер основы власти в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике в значительной степени затрудняет осуществление прав человека, а государственная ориентация деятельности национальных органов с целью обеспечить выживание верхушки режима под прикрытием так называемых "коллективных" прав и национального суверенитета затрудняет реализацию прав человека"⁹. В 2010 году он отметил, что, "учитывая множество особенностей и аномалий положения в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, его можно описать лишь как sui generis ("единственное в своем роде"). В целом в этой стране совершается много мучительных и вопиющих нарушений прав человека"¹⁰.

14. Оба специальных докладчика также подняли вопрос о совершении в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике преступлений против человечности. В 2007 году Специальный докладчик отметил исследование, в котором утверждалось, что "неправомерные действия властей равнозначны преступлениям против человечности, поскольку они отвечают условиям совершения преднамеренных или широко распространенных или систематических нападения на гражданское население"¹¹. Он также выразил мысль о том, что помимо ответственности государства возникает вопрос об уголовной ответственности отдельных лиц, которая "может быть обусловлена совершением преступлений против человечности"¹². В 2008 году Специальный докладчик заявил, что "после учреждения Международного уголовного суда можно также активизировать деятельность по установлению индивидуальной уголовной ответственности, если местные институты власти не способны или не желают привлекать к ответственности лиц, совершивших серьезные преступления"¹³. Специальный докладчик заключил, что, "хотя многое зависит от наличия на глобальном/местном уровнях политической воли продемонстрировать стремление к транспарентности и ответственности, ... важно подчеркнуть долгосрочный и

15. В 2010 году Специальный докладчик отметил, что «события, происходящие в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, в наибольшей степени подходят под категорию международных "преступлений против человечности"»¹⁵. Он констатировал, что "шесть лет наблюдений за положением в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике со всей очевидностью свидетельствуют о том, что нарушения, совершаемые в отношении обычного населения, за которое руководство страны должно нести ответственность, являются вопиющими и повсеместными"¹⁶.

16. В 2012 году Специальный докладчик подчеркнул, что "при определенных обстоятельствах широко распространенное или систематическое заключение под стражу или другие виды длительного лишения свободы в нарушение международного права могут представлять собой преступления против человечности"¹⁷.

17. На протяжении почти десятилетия Генеральная Ассамблея, Генеральный секретарь, бывшая Комиссия по правам человека, Совет по правам человека, Специальный докладчик и договорные органы постоянно и неоднократно обращались к властям Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики с призывами положить конец этим нарушениям и обеспечить уважение прав человека всех своих граждан. В 2009 году Генеральный секретарь отметил, что правительство Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики "не приняло значительных мер в качестве реакции на неоднократные сообщения о систематических и широко распространенных нарушениях прав человека, а также для обеспечения прав человека"¹⁸.

18. Необходимость привлечения к ответственности вновь и вновь подтверждалась в резолюциях, принятых Организацией Объединенных Наций, и особенно Генеральной Ассамблеей. С 2009 года Генеральная Ассамблея настоятельно призывала правительство "решить проблему безнаказанности и обеспечить, чтобы лица, виновные в нарушениях прав человека, были привлечены к ответственности в независимом суде"¹⁹.

19. Озабоченность по поводу безнаказанности усугубляется отсутствием у правительства Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики последовательного курса на сотрудничество с механизмами Организации Объединенных Наций в области прав человека. Характерным примером стало направление правительством Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики 23 августа 1997 года уведомления на имя Генерального секретаря о выходе из Международного пакта о гражданских и политических правах, к которому страна при-соединилась к 14 сентября 1981 года²⁰. 23 сентября 1997 года в памятной записке в адрес правительства Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики Генеральный секретарь заявил, что, по его мнению, выход из Пакта не представляется возможным до тех пор, пока все государства – участники Пакта не согласятся с таким выходом²¹. 8 декабря 1997 года Комитет по правам человека принял замечание общего порядка 26 о континуитете обязательств в соответствии с Международным пактом о гражданских и политических правах. В этой связи Комитет выразил свое твердое убеждение в том, что в соответствии с международным правом государство, которое ратифицировало Пакт, присоединилось к нему или стало его участником в порядке правопреемства, не может денонсировать его или выйти из него²². В конечном итоге 25 декабря 1999 года Корейская Народно-Демократическая Республика представила свой второй периодический доклад²³ в Комитет по правам человека, в принципе охватывающий период с 1984 года по 1997 год, который был впоследствии рассмотрен Комитетом в июле 2001 года²⁴.

20. Кроме того, правительство Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики отказывается признать мандат Специального докладчика или сотрудничать с ним, а также с момента учреждения мандата Специального докладчика в 2004 году последовательно и решительно отвергает резолюции, принятые бывшей Комиссией по правам человека, Советом по правам человека и Генеральной Ассамблеей по вопросу о положении в области прав человека в этой стране. Совсем недавно, 20 декабря 2012 года, на Генеральной Ассамблее представитель Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики, по сообщениям, заявил, что правительство категорически отвергает резолюцию о положении в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, поскольку она не имеет ничего общего с правами человека в стране. Нарушений, упомянутых в тексте этой резолюции, на самом деле не существует. Он якобы заявил также, что текст представляет собой явное навязывание преднамеренно искаженного представления о положении в области прав человека и призван оказать нажим на национальную систему социального обеспечения, представляя собой вмешательство во внутренние дела страны. Это акт политического терроризма и свидетельство двойных стандартов, тогда как любое рассмотрение прав человека должно проводиться в соответствии с принципами объективности в рамках Универсального периодического обзора. Основные авторы стремятся дестабилизировать положение в стране под предлогом защиты прав человека. Хотя резолюция была принята без голосования, это не может быть истолковано как принятие на основе консенсуса²⁵.

21. Кроме того, с 2003 года правительство Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики отвергает все предложения о технической помощи со стороны Управления Верховного комиссара Организации Объединенных Наций по правам человека (УВКПЧ)²⁶.

22. В дополнение к этому в декабре 2009 года в ходе принятия доклада²⁷ о Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике по итогам универсального периодического обзора (УПО) правительство оказалось не в состоянии определить рекомендации, которые пользуются его поддержкой. Это первый случай отказа государства принять хотя бы одну из полученных 167 рекомендаций. Делегация отвергла 50 рекомендаций, содержащихся в докладе Рабочей группы, и зарезервировала свою позицию по остальным 117 рекомендациям. По этой причине 21 декабря 2010 года Генеральная Ассамблея выразила свою серьезную озабоченность в связи с "отказом правительства Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики указать, какие рекомендации были поддержаны ею по итогам универсального периодического обзора, проведенного Советом по правам человека, или выразить готовность выполнять их и сожалеет по поводу отсутствия до настоящего времени действий по выполнению рекомендаций, содержащихся в итоговом документе"²⁸.

23. В 2008 году Специальный докладчик отметил, что "национальным властям и международному сообществу надлежит решить проблему безнаказанности, которая позволяла и/или позволяет совершать такие нарушения в течение длительного периода времени"²⁹. В 2010 году он прямо заявил, что, поскольку "национальные власти не могут или не хотят обеспечить такого рода подотчетность"³⁰, международное сообщество могло бы принять дальнейшие меры, чтобы обеспечить такую подотчетность – будь то по линии ответственности государств и/или индивидуальной уголовной ответственности. В 2011 году Специальный докладчик сообщил, что "Международный уголовный суд приступил к рассмотрению вопроса о том, является ли военным преступлением, относящимся к юрисдикции суда, потопление корабля "Чхонан", военного судна Республики Корея, якобы пораженного торпедой, выпущенной с подводной лодки Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики 26 марта 2010 года, которое привело к смерти 46 человек, а также обстрел острова Енпхёндо 23 ноября 2010 года, приведший к смерти двух гражданских лиц и к ранению многих других". Рассмотрение в Суде этих двух инцидентов ставит вопрос об ответственности за другие предполагаемые преступления, совершенные Корейской Народно-Демократической Республикой, включая вопрос похищений"³¹.

24. Анализируя в 2010 году возможности решения проблем безнаказанности и подотчетности, Специальный докладчик задался следующим вопросом: "С учетом того, что ответственность за уголовные преступления носит индивидуальный характер и что Корейская Народно-Демократическая Республика не присоединилась к Римскому статуту Международного уголовного суда, в какой мере в упомянутых целях можно использовать возможности Международного уголовного суда"³². В числе возможных вариантов действий Специальный докладчик упомянул в 2010 году "возможность прямого вмешательства Совета Безопасности в соответствующую ситуацию и создания комиссии по расследованию преступлений против человечности"³³. Он также призвал международное сообщество "рассмотреть вопрос о борьбе с безнаказанностью с помощью различных мер как под углом зрения ответственности государства, так и под углом зрения индивидуальной уголовной ответственности, и добиваться принятия всей системой Организации Объединенных Наций, и в частности Советом Безопасности и такими учреждениями, как Международный уголовный суд, мер по предотвращению вопиющих нарушений, защите людей от виктимизации и предоставлению им эффективной правовой защиты"³⁴.

25. Специальный докладчик придерживается мнения о том, что многие, если не все, из девяти категорий нарушений, выявленных в настоящем докладе, могут быть квалифицированы как преступления против человечности, совершаемые в рамках широкомасштабного и/или систематического нападения на гражданское население, в соответствии пунктом 1 статьи 7 Римского статута Международного уголовного суда, в частности подпунктами а) убийство; с) порабощение; е) заключение в тюрьму или другое жестокое лишение физической свободы в нарушение основополагающих норм международного права; f) пытки; h) преследование идентифицируемой группы или общности по политическим и религиозным мотивам; i) насильственное исчезновение людей; и k) другие бесчеловечные деяния аналогичного характера, заключающиеся в умышленном причинении сильных страданий или серьезных телесных повреждений или серьезного ущерба психическому или физическому здоровью.

26. Право на свободу от пыток является правом, не допускающим отступлений, в соответствии со статьей 7 Международного пакта о гражданских и политических правах (МПГПП), участником которого является Корейская Народно-Демократическая Республика.

27. Аналогичным образом, императивное международное право ставит знак равенства между насильственным исчезновением и пыткой. Специальный докладчик отмечает, что, поскольку насильственное исчезновение может предполагать несколько различных нарушений прав человека, включая свободу передвижения, свободу и безопасность личности; свободу от пыток и жестоких, бесчеловечных или унижающих достоинство видов обращения; или даже право на жизнь, данное деяние нарушает сразу несколько положений Международного пакта о гражданских и политических правах. Кроме того, он отмечает, что насильственные исчезновения, в том числе путем похищения агентами Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики иностранных граждан, включая граждан Республики Корея и Японии, могут представлять собой преступления против человечности в соответствии со статьей 7, пункты 1) i) и 2) i), Римского статута, если они являются частью систематических или широко распространенных нападений на гражданское население. В этой связи следует подчеркнуть, что насильственные исчезновения (независимо от того, являются ли они преступлениями против человечности) представляют собой длящиеся деяния, так как они продолжаются до тех пор, пока не будет выяснена судьба жертвы, и на этом основании на них не распространяются сроки давности.

³² A/HRC/13/47, пункт 59.

³³ A/HRC/13/47, пункт 58.

³⁴ A/HRC/13/47, пункт 89 е).

28. Специальный докладчик считает, что серьезные нарушения прав человека в тюремных лагерях или даже сам факт существования таких лагерей, где в рабских условиях содержатся политические заключенные, могут квалифицироваться в качестве преступлений против человечности в соответствии с подпунктами с) порабощение и е) заключение в тюрьму или другое жестокое лишение физической свободы в нарушение основополагающих норм международного права пункта 1 статьи 7 Римского статута. Он также отмечает, что особо бесчеловечные условия и обращение, которым намеренно подвергаются задержанные в тюремных лагерях, могут подпадать под состав преступлений против человечности, в том числе на основании всех конкретных актов, указанных в пункте 25 выше.

29. 3 апреля 2012 года Международная коалиция за прекращение преступлений против человечности в Северной Корее (ICNK)³⁵ – коалиция в составе порядка 40 международных неправительственных организаций – обратилась с петицией³⁶ в адрес специальных процедур Совета по правам человека по поводу использования трудовых лагерей для содержания политических заключенных и нарушения прав человека в этих лагерях. Они были подробно изложены в меморандуме "Положение заключенных в системе ГУЛАГа (Кван-ли-со) Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики". Коалиция, в частности, рекомендовала, чтобы международное сообщество приняло эффективные меры для облегчения страданий 150–200 тыс. человек, находящихся в таких лагерях; и чтобы Организация Объединенных Наций, действуя через посредство Генеральной Ассамблеи или Совета по правам человека, создала комиссию по расследованию преступлений против человечности, совершаемых в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, с целью установления ответственности государства и отдельных лиц за продолжающееся совершение таких преступлений. На основе этой петиции 3 октября 2012 года пять мандатариев, а именно Специальный докладчик по вопросу о положении в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике; Специальный докладчик по вопросу о внесудебных казнях, казнях без надлежащего судебного разбирательства и произвольных казнях, Специальный докладчик по вопросу о пытках и других жестоких, бесчеловечных или унижающих достоинство видов обращения и наказания; Рабочая группа по произвольным задержаниям и Рабочая группа по насильственным и недобровольным исчезновениям, направили правительству Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики совместное письмо с изложением утверждений о предполагаемом использовании трудовых лагерей для содержания политических заключенных. На момент составления настоящего доклада мандатарии не получили ответа от правительства.

30. Специальный докладчик считает, что в соответствии со своим обязательством, взятым на Всемирном саммите 2005 года, международное сообщество, через посредство Организации Объединенных Наций, обязано использовать соответствующие мирные средства для содействия защите населения Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики от преступлений против человечности³⁷. В качестве одного из минимальных шагов и в соответствии с формирующейся практикой в отношении других стран, где серьезные нарушения совершаются на систематической или широко распространенной основе, он считает, что международное сообщество должно проводить независимое и беспристрастное международное расследование ситуации при наличии оснований считать, что имеет место совершение преступлений против человечности и сама соответствующая страна не проводит эффективного независимого и беспристрастного расследования. Хотя этого обычно не бывает достаточно, чтобы покончить с преступлениями против человечности, более пристальное внимание со стороны международного сообщества в рамках международного расследования обеспечивает дополнительный элемент защиты, особенно в сочетании с перспективой грядущего уголовного расследования и эффекта сдерживания, который такая перспектива может оказать на отдельных правонарушителей.

V. Выводы и рекомендации

31. Настоящий обзор документации Организации Объединенных Наций по вопросу о положении в области прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике с 2004 года указывает на необходимость создания механизма расследования с адекватными ресурсами для расследования и более полного документирования серьезных, систематических и широкомасштабных нарушений прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике и представления докладов Совету по правам человека и Генеральной Ассамблее. В ходе расследования необходимо рассмотреть вопросы институциональной и персональной ответственности за такие нарушения, особенно если они могут быть квалифицированы как преступления против человечности, и вынести соответствующие рекомендации органам власти Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики и международному сообществу для дальнейших действий. Расследование охватывало бы:

а) более подробный анализ серьезных, массовых и систематических нарушений прав человека в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, определенных в настоящем докладе, путем сбора и фиксации показаний жертв и информации от оставшихся в живых очевидцев, свидетелей и виновных;

б) более подробное описание наиболее вопиющих нарушений прав человека, совершаемых в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, в частности более подробное изучение широкомасштабной и систематической практики пыток и произвольных задержаний и всего комплекса нарушений в тюремных лагерях, а также похищений иностранных граждан;

с) более тщательное изучение вопроса о дискриминации в рамках системного ущемления и нарушения основных прав человека и основных свобод, включая доступ к продовольствию, ограничения на свободу передвижения, свободу выражения своего мнения, произвольные аресты и пытки;

д) подробное изучение и юридический анализ вопроса о совершении преступлений против человечности в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике, а также нарушений прав иностранцев, включая похищенных лиц; и

е) более тщательное изучение вопроса о привлечении к ответственности в Корейской Народно-Демократической Республике с учетом проблемы повсеместной безнаказанности и отказа правительства на протяжении почти десятилетия от сотрудничества с механизмами Организации Объединенных Наций по правам человека.

32. Кроме того, Специальный докладчик вновь подтверждает все рекомендации в адрес правительства Корейской Народно-Демократической Республики, содержащиеся в его докладах для Совета по правам человека и Генеральной Ассамблеи.

Analysis of patterns of human rights violations in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, documented by the United Nations through its reports and resolutions since 2004

A. Violation of the right to food

1. The right to food in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea is the human rights issue that has been extensively documented by the United Nations. The question of access to food, food distribution and humanitarian food assistance is dealt with in all resolutions of the Human Rights Council and the General Assembly and all reports by the Special Rapporteur and the Secretary-General.

2. The Secretary-General has consistently highlighted his particular concern about the severity of the food situation the country is facing and its impact on the economic, social and cultural rights of the population.¹ A number of actors within the United Nations system have highlighted that even if the food shortage was caused by natural disasters, the root causes are due to the mismanagement on the part of the authorities. The Special Rapporteur noted, "Even where there are natural disasters afflicting the general population, the root causes are often man-made, and it is the regime in power which shares responsibility for this."² The Human Rights Council has expressed deep concern "at the continuing reports of systematic, widespread and grave violations of...economic, social and cultural rights in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea."³

3. The Special Rapporteur stressed that the issue is not simply lack of food for the population, but rather the manipulative control of food distribution by the regime. He noted, "The authorities seek to control the food distribution process as a means of controlling the population and making them dependent on the regime."⁴

4. In 2002, the Government took various measures to open the door to quasi-market activities (the new Economics Management Improvement Measures Policy), thus enabling the population to engage in the market system at a limited level, to produce, buy and sell their goods. The public distribution system (PDS) was seen as non-functional, and people were given additional wages to fend for themselves. In 2005, for fear of losing their grip on the population, the authorities started to impose the PDS again on the population and to prohibit market activities, despite the fact that the system was unable to respond effectively to the needs of the population.⁵

5. Economic activities, particularly by women, were severely curtailed in the period of 2007-2008, when the authorities prohibited women under 40 years of age from trading; the age was subsequently raised to 49.⁶

6. In 2008, it was reported that army personnel were forcing farmers to provide them with food, to the detriment of the latter's livelihood. The authorities were also reportedly subjecting markets to greater scrutiny and punishing traders in the pursuit of State control over the population.⁷

7. At the end of 2008, the authorities planned to reduce the frequency of the trade at open markets to once a month. The authorities were also reportedly closing general markets and transforming them into farmers' markets, with a ban on rice sales.⁸

8. In 2009, it was reported that small-lot and small-patch farming would be prohibited.⁹

9. Moreover, the Special Rapporteur has stressed the discriminatory nature of food policies, noting the great disparity between access by the elite to food and other necessities and access by the rest of the population to the wherewithal of life. He has concluded that food aid is provided by the Government in violation of the principle of non-discrimination.¹⁰ He has also stressed that the excessive expenditure by the authorities on its defence sector, based upon the country's "military-first" policy causes serious distortions in the national budget and its use of national resources. The Special Rapporteur considers this a key impediment to the country's development process as well as the right to food and life and other rights.

10. The Special Rapporteur has expressed particular concern about those most vulnerable to food insecurity, like children, pregnant and lactating women, the elderly and people with disabilities. In 2004 an extensive food and nutrition survey carried out by United Nations agencies in cooperation with the Democratic People's Republic of Korea revealed that while the situation of children had improved on some fronts in regard to malnutrition, the situation of women had not improved: some one third of mothers were found to be malnourished and anaemic, which obviously affected children's malnutrition.¹¹

11. The United Nations has also consistently highlighted the problem of access of humanitarian assistance.¹² In 2004, the Government started to accept foreign food aid to alleviate the chronic situation. However, in 2005 and 2006, it tried to reduce that aid and the presence of international agencies working on the issue in an attempt to curb outside influence¹³. There was a further obstacle in July 2006 due to the missile tests launched by the Government in the face of global opposition. This event had a negative impact on the food situation of the country, since it caused various contributors of humanitarian aid to discontinue providing that aid.¹⁴

12. Concurrently, matters became more complicated due to devastating floods that caused substantial damage and loss of lives in July and August 2006. These disasters pressured the authorities to reopen the country to outside aid.¹⁵ Owing to this humanitarian crisis, some of the contributors of humanitarian aid changed their position and resumed provision of aid, particularly at the bilateral level. However, the Special Rapporteur noted that the World Food Programme (WFP) monitoring showed that progressive cuts had led to rations of 150 grams of cereals per person per day in June 2008, down from 450 grams in early 2008.¹⁶

13. According to the Special Rapporteur, in 2009 the aid situation became more desperate.¹⁷ Although in 2008, the offer by the United States of America of some 500,000 tons of food aid over a 12-month period was accepted by the country, and a group of United States (US) non-governmental organizations (NGOs) were permitted access to the country to help with the delivery, at the beginning of 2009, the country stopped accepting US aid and asked all the NGOs to leave. The Special Rapporteur noted that this was the result of “the authority’s unease with the monitoring of the food aid process and the use of Korean interpreters from outside the country.”¹⁸

14. In 2009, the Secretary-General took note of a range of reports indicated that the authorities had blocked access to alternative sources of food by forbidding kitchen farming in private households and closing down markets where food items were traded. In 2009, the Secretary-General concluded that the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea was failing to fulfil its obligations under international human rights law to protect the right to adequate food.¹⁹

15. In March 2011, a United Nations survey found that more than six million vulnerable people urgently required international food assistance. In a report, released in November 2011, by the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) and WFP showed that many of the factors behind the shortage of food, including the adverse weather conditions, underdevelopment and structural problems, in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea had intensified.²⁰

16. Moreover, in December 2011, the General Assembly noted a deterioration of the situation and expressed its “very deep concern at the precarious humanitarian situation including a serious deterioration in the availability of and access to food, in the country, partly as a result of frequent natural disasters, compounded by structural weakness in agricultural production resulting in significant shortages of food, and the increasing State restrictions on the cultivation and trade in foodstuffs, as well as the prevalence of chronic and acute malnutrition, particularly among the most vulnerable groups, pregnant women, infants and the elderly, which, despite some progress, continues to affect the physical and mental development of a significant proportion of children.”²¹

Recommendations on the right to food

17. Since 2008, the Human Rights Council in its various resolutions has urged “the Government of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea to ensure safe and unhindered access of humanitarian assistance that is delivered impartially on the basis of need, in accordance with humanitarian principles.”²²

18. The Special Rapporteur emphasized that “the primary obligation to feed people lies with the State, which must take all measures necessary to rectify existing flaws in the production and distribution system that have contributed [to] the shortage of food.” He also called on the Government to reduce military/defence expenditure and ensure equitable re-allocation of resources to respond effectively to the food crisis and other areas needing development.²³

19. The Special Rapporteur stressed that the human rights obligations of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea are in no sense contingent on the provisions of external humanitarian assistance by the international community, but merely an impetus for emergency response.²⁴

20. Finally, he further recognized that it is important to ensure such aid distribution reaches the neediest population and in line with the long-standing United Nations policy of “no access, no aid,” which needs to be respected by all States receiving aid.²⁵

B. Torture and inhuman treatment

21. General Assembly resolutions adopted between 2006 and 2012 highlighted “torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment” among several systemic, widespread and grave violations of human rights in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea. Moreover, the General Assembly made specific reference to punishments inflicted on citizens of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea who have been repatriated from abroad, “such as treating their departure as treason, leading to punishments of internment, torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or the death penalty” (emphasis added).²⁶ The Human Rights Council deplored “the use of torture...against political prisoners and repatriated citizens of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea”.²⁷

22. In 2007, the Special Rapporteur stressed that there are continuing reports of violence against the human person committed by State authorities, such as torture, public executions, and persecution of political dissidents.²⁸

23. In 2008, the Secretary-General expressed his serious concern at the fact that reports emanating from the country “continue to indicate trends of torture, inhumane conditions of detention, public execution, ill-treatment of refugees or asylum-seekers repatriated from abroad.”²⁹ The same year, in his report to the General Assembly, the Special Rapporteur stated that an “overhaul of the prison system is long overdue, and the harsh conditions imposed by the criminal justice system and related detention give rise to a plethora of abuses, including torture and cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment. The abuses are ubiquitous, and include degrading treatment of deceased persons.”³⁰

24. In 2009, the Special Rapporteur highlighted that although torture is prohibited by law, it is extensively practised in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea.³¹ He quoted from the White Paper on Human Rights in North Korea, a document³² produced by the Korean Bar Association that documents violations, including cases of torture practised against women who are returned to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea: "Female repatriates suffer what is called 'pumping' torture, which is a common sexual torture to find money hidden inside a woman's vagina. Women who face this torture are stripped of their clothing, and their arms are tied behind their backs. Then they squat and stand repeatedly until they lose consciousness. It maximizes the sense of shame in women ... Assault against pregnant women is also routinized, and wrapping the forcibly aborted baby's face with plastic to [induce] death is known [in] frequent occurrences."³³

25. In 2011, in his report to the Human Rights Council³⁴, the Special Rapporteur analysed the situation of human rights in detention and correctional facilities. He noted he had learned from various sources that human rights violations are committed in all correctional centres: "Correctional officers sometimes beat inmates, but it is understood that more often it is the inmates who would beat up other inmates upon instruction from the officers."³⁵

26. While in Japan on 25-28 January 2011 and the Republic of Korea on 22-26 November 2010, the Special Rapporteur heard some graphic stories of the conditions and treatment of the detainees in various camps in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. He noted that "some of the most flagrant human rights violations, such as torture and detention without due process of law, are reported to be perpetrated in these camps."³⁶

27. The Secretary-General noted in 2012 that some reports also indicate the existence of prison camps where torture and execution are widespread.³⁷

28. A joint urgent appeal was sent on 24 February 2012 by the Special Rapporteur on torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, the Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions and the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention, raising concerns about the arrest of a group of 31 citizens of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea in a neighbouring country and fears regarding their possible refoulement to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. It had been alleged that, if repatriated, the individuals would be subjected to detention, torture and execution as illegal border crossers.³⁸

Recommendations on torture and inhuman treatment

29. During the Universal Periodic Review of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea in December 2009, several Member States recommended that the Government of the ratify the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and its Optional Protocol.³⁹ Moreover, in several of his reports, the Special Rapporteur called upon the Government to reform the prison system in order to prevent torture and to end public executions.⁴⁰

C. Arbitrary detention

30. In 2004 and 2005, the Commission on Human Rights identified arbitrary detention as part of a continuing pattern of “systemic, widespread and grave violations of human rights in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea.”⁴¹ General Assembly resolutions adopted between 2006 and 2012 highlighted, among several systemic, widespread and grave violations of human rights, “extrajudicial and arbitrary detention; the absence of due process and the rule of law, including fair trial guarantees and an independent judiciary,” expressing its serious concern.

31. In 2006, the Special Rapporteur stressed that the judicial system lacks independence and is heavily influenced by the regime in power. In addition to the opaque nature of the ordinary courts, there is a parallel quasi-penal regime which does not comply with rule of law guarantees such as judicial independence, natural justice, respect for the rights of the accused and access to lawyers.⁴²

32. Moreover, in 2009 the Special Rapporteur highlighted that “...judges are appointed by the State and operate under the direction of the Supreme People’s Assembly. The jury system is based on two people who work with the courts (usually one judge at first instance) - not to ensure that the rights of the accused are upheld but to confirm the list of crimes presented at the trials and to confirm the conviction of the alleged wrongdoer. Anomalously, lawyers protect the State rather than their defendants. On-site open trials are also held, ostensibly to educate the public; in reality, they are an instrument to intimidate the public, without any regard for the defendant’s right to a fair trial and the right to privacy.”⁴³

33. In his 2009 report to the Human Rights Council, the Special Rapporteur qualified many punishments applied in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea as “totally unreasonable and abusive”⁴⁴. The Special Rapporteur noted, for instance, “students are reported to have been sent to labour training (re-education and forced labour) for watching South Korean dramas. Citizens who fail to turn up for work allocated to them by the State are sent to labour camps. There is a wide variety of detention facilities ranging from political detention camps (kwanliso) for political crimes to correctional labour punishment in labour camps (kyohwaso) for other crimes.”⁴⁵

34. The United Nations documentation has highlighted that a number of constitutional and legislative provisions seriously endanger the impartiality and independence of the judiciary in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea. Moreover, some articles in the Criminal Code are either not in line with international standards or contain terms that are not defined or are vague, thus allowing scope for misinterpretation and abuse by the State.

35. In his 2007 report to the Human Rights Council,⁴⁶ the Special Rapporteur had noted that there are a large number of provisions concerning anti-State activities that give rise to concern due to their excessively broad scope and the way that the authorities might use such provisions to repress political dissent. He noted for instance that there are “14 types of anti-State, anti-people crimes; 16 types of crimes of disturbing the national defence system; 104 types of crimes of injuring the socialist economy; 26 types of crimes of injuring the socialist culture; 39 types of crimes of injuring administrative systems; and 20 types of crimes of harming socialist collective life. Several may be punished with the death sentence.”⁴⁷

36. In 2012, the Special Rapporteur stressed that a number of provisions in the Criminal Code fall below the standard required to ensure that due process of law is maintained and the rights of people are respected; for instance, the definition of “labour training” and “training detention facilities” remains unclear; the possibility of a broad interpretation of the category of “political crime” remains; and elements such as “crimes by association” are maintained in several parts of the Criminal Code. Similar vague terms, such as “extremely grave crime” and “reform through labour”, are contained in an addendum to the Criminal Code, which was adopted on 19 December 2007.⁴⁸ A number of provisions of the Criminal Code also stipulate punishment for acts that would not normally warrant criminal liability.⁴⁹ All these provisions can be the basis for arbitrary.

37. One particularly worrying practice, widely documented by the United Nations, is detention due to guilt by association: when a person is punished for a political or ideological crime, members of his or her family are also punished. As early as 2005, the Special Rapporteur had denounced forms of collective punishment based upon ‘guilt by association.’ The Special Rapporteur noted that this practice “has both horizontal and vertical impact – horizontal in that it leads to the persecution of immediate family members and vertical in that it may lead to the stigmatization of subsequent generations, given that the authorities keep records of families as part of the iron grip on the population.”⁵⁰

38. Political prison camps are another issue of serious concern. In 2011, the Special Rapporteur stated that in Kwalinso 15 and Yodok camps, thousands of people are believed to be held by reason of “guilt by association.” The majority of such people reportedly do not seem to know the reasons for their imprisonment or what crimes they are accused of.⁵¹

39. Several United Nations reports also document the detention of the citizens of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea, who return to their country after deportation, including victims of trafficking, in violation of their rights. In a joint urgent appeal by several Special Rapporteurs, it was stated that according to the information received, nationals of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea commit a criminal offence if they leave the country without official permission, punishable by up to two years in a labour training camp (nodongdanryundae) or a detention centre (jipkyulso), in grave cases up to three years. Defection to a foreign country or to the enemy in betrayal of the country and the people is also a criminal offence punishable by no less than five years of detention in a political labour camp (kwanliso) or a re-education labour camp (kyohwaso).⁵² The 2012 report of the Special Rapporteur to the General Assembly notes that article 233 of the Criminal Code foresees up to five years of labour for anyone illegally crossing the border of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea, which is in contravention to the right to freedom of movement.⁵³

40. The United Nations has clearly identified arbitrary detention as a widespread, systematic and grave form of abuse occurring in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea. Political prison camps are said to have as many as 200,000 prisoners and citizens are routinely imprisoned for acts that should not be punishable by law, including for leaving their own country.

Recommendations on arbitrary detention

41. The Special Rapporteur has consistently called on the Government to release political prisoners, particularly those imprisoned for guilt by association.⁵⁴

42. The Special Rapporteur has called on the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to repeal provisions in its legislation that run counter to international standards, in particular within the Criminal Code.⁵⁵

43. The Special Rapporteur has recommended that the Democratic People's Republic of Korea guarantee personal security and freedoms by, among others, reforming the justice system, and abiding by the rule of law with safeguards for accused persons, fair trials, the development of an independent judiciary and checks and balances against abuses of power.⁵⁶

44. The General Assembly and the Human Rights Council have made repeated calls for the authorities of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to stop subjecting returnees to the country to any kind of punishment, including detention.⁵⁷

D. Prison camps

45. Many United Nations entities have decried the use of prison camps in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, ranging from the General Assembly and the Human Rights Council to the Secretary-General and the Special Rapporteur.

46. The General Assembly, in its resolutions adopted between 2006 and 2012 on the Democratic People's Republic of Korea highlighted, among several systemic, widespread and grave violations of human rights, "the existence of a large number of prison camps and the extensive use of forced labour," expressing its serious concern.⁵⁸

47. The Commission on Human Rights and the Human Rights Council "expressed very serious concern" at the use of prison camps in their annual resolutions from 2003 to 2012.⁵⁹ In 2009, the Human Rights Council deplored the grave, widespread and systematic human rights abuses in the country and in particular the use of torture and labour camps for "political prisoners and repatriated citizens of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea."⁶⁰

48. In 2007, the Special Rapporteur referred to the existence of a large variety of detention centres ranging from those for political dissidents to those for criminals, as well as re-education camps and forced labour camps. He noted the various denominations of these centres including gwanliso (political labour camp), gyohwaso (long-term prison labour camp), jipgyulso (detention facility) and rodongdanryundae (labour facility).⁶¹

49. In 2009, the Special Rapporteur underlined his concern at the use of unreasonable and abusive punishments, and noted in his reports to the Human Rights Council and the General Assembly that there are allegations of public and secret executions in political detention camps.⁶² In February 2010, the Special Rapporteur indicated that “different sources indicate a conglomeration of huge camps for political prisoners and their families, who are often held there in perpetuity.” These included Kaecheon, Yodok, Hwasong, Bukchang, Hoeryong, Chonjin are some of the camps of infamy.⁶³

50. In March 2010, the Special Rapporteur sent a letter to the Government of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea regarding conditions in six prison camps and detention centres for political detainees, raising concerns about allegations of forced labour and limited access to basic necessities, such food, shelter, clothing, sanitation and medical treatment. He noted the allegation that the camps hold a large number of persons who have been detained for expressing political opinions, defecting or engaging in acts against the Government, or who are family members of accused persons. In a letter dated 31 March 2010, the Government responded to the Special Rapporteur’s communication by simply stating that it did not recognize his mandate. The Government also stated that since it believed that the communication was based on fabricated information, it saw no need to comment on its substance.⁶⁴

51. In his report to the Human Rights Council in 2011, the Special Rapporteur dealt with the question of detention centres and political prisons in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea.⁶⁵ In this report, he noted that apart from the official correctional centres, North Korea is reported to have been operating a number of “political concentration camps”, collection centres and labour training camps. Political prisoners are incarcerated in what is known as “Kwanliso”, operated by the Farm Guidance Bureau of the State Security Agency. He noted that these facilities are also often called “control districts” or “special district for dictatorial control” and that some of the most flagrant human rights violations, such as torture and detention without due process of law are reported to be perpetrated there.

52. The Special Rapporteur further noted that references to such labour training camps can be found in some of legal instruments of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (Article 18 of the Sentences and Decisions Enforcement Law, as amended on 9 November 1998, the revised Penal Code of 2004). This reinforced the Special Rapporteur’s view that reforms need to take place both to end the use of such labour training camps and amend legislation to ensure it is aligned with international standards.⁶⁶

53. In his 2011 report to the General Assembly⁶⁷ the Special Rapporteur highlighted the fact that human rights groups have published satellite images of alleged political prison camps in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea. He noted that these images show four of the six camps occupying large land areas within vast wildernesses of the provinces of South Pyongan, South Hamkyung and North Hamkyung. He also explained that a comparison of the latest pictures with satellite imagery from 2001 reportedly indicates a significant increase in the scale of the camps. He stated that it is estimated that the network of political prisons in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea, some of which are believed to be in operation since 1950s, hold up to 200,000 people.

54. The Special Rapporteur's report described some of the conditions under which prisoners are reportedly held: "Reports indicate that a room of about 50 square metres houses about 30-40 political prisoners under harsh conditions. It is alleged that in most camps, no clothing is provided and prisoners face harsh winters. Inmates are also expected to work long hours performing manual labour."⁶⁸

55. He further noted that in Kwanliso 15 and Yodok prison camps, thousands of people are believed to be held by reason of "guilt by association." The majority of such people reportedly do not seem to know the reasons for their imprisonment or what crimes they are accused of.⁶⁹ The Special Rapporteur had already noted in 2005 that "A very disconcerting practice is documented by various sources – collective punishment based upon 'guilt by association.' This means that if a person is punished for a political or ideological crime, members of his or her family are also punished."⁷⁰

56. At its sixty-third session in 2012, the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention adopted an opinion in the case of Shin SookJa, Oh Hae Won and Oh Kyu Won.⁷¹ The three were allegedly detained in 1987 solely in response to the defection of Oh Kil Nam (husband of the former and father of the latter two). The three were allegedly held in Yodok political prison camp and later transferred to a camp near Pyongyang. In its opinion the Working Group stated that under certain circumstances "widespread or systematic imprisonment or other severe deprivation of liberty in violation of the fundamental rules of international law may constitute crimes against humanity."⁷² The Working Group concluded that the continued detention of Shin SookJa, Oh Hae Won and Oh Kyu Won is in contravention to international law and arbitrary. It requested the Government to take the necessary steps to remedy the situation, which in its view, includes the immediate release from detention and an enforceable right to compensation for the prisoners.⁷³

57. In 2012, the Special Rapporteur mentioned the case of Shin SookJa, Oh Hae Won and Oh Kyu Won in his report to the General Assembly⁷⁴ stating that this is an example of citizens of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea held in prison camps for guilt by association. He noted several disturbing reports from non-governmental organizations and other sources of widespread arbitrary detention and forced labour, without specific charges or due process and with gross violations of human rights. He also observed that "under certain circumstances, widespread or systematic imprisonment or other severe deprivation of liberty in violation of international law may constitute crimes against humanity" (emphasis added).⁷⁵

Recommendations on prison camps

58. In 2011, the Secretary-General urged the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to improve conditions in prisons and detention centres, and release political prisoners.⁷⁶ The Special Rapporteur also made similar calls and proposed "that the authorities begin the release of political prisoners starting with certain categories of prisoners, such as the elderly, those having medical conditions, long serving prisoners, women who have children and persons imprisoned due to guilt by association.”⁷⁷

E. Discrimination

59. The United Nations reports and resolutions have documented several patterns of discrimination in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea, in particular:

(a) Division of society into three different groups of allegiance to the regime, which affects the citizen’s level of enjoyment of human rights and fundamental freedoms, including access to food;

(b) Discrimination against women, children, the elderly and persons with disabilities, including the disproportionate effect of malnutrition on these populations and specific violations that individuals in each of these categories suffer; and

(c) Violations specifically affecting those who have been repatriated to the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea and their families.

60. Since 2005, the Special Rapporteur has highlighted that while the Constitution and other laws in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea enshrine the principle of non-discrimination, the practice is defective.⁷⁸ The Special Rapporteur notes that the Government divides the population into three different groups: those close to the regime (the core mass), the group in the middle (the basic mass), and those considered hostile to the regime (the complex mass).⁷⁹ He describes the way in which these divisions affect people’s access to basic rights and services: “The first group is the ruling elite, which is well endowed with privileges, such as access to special schools and hospitals. They are allowed to own private phones and read foreign publications. The second is the majority of the population, such as farmers and workers. They are provided with food rations, although dwindling in recent years due to the Government’s experimentation with the market economy and a reduction in the State-sponsored public distribution system. The third group is considered to be the enemies of the State and is persecuted accordingly. They include the landed class before the communist takeover of the country, public officials under Japanese rule, religious groups, and those who assisted South Korean forces during the Korean War (1950-1953). They are denied access to college education and are discriminated against in their access to basic necessities such as housing, medical care and education. Many land up in the prisons referred to below. While this practice may have been abolished in law, it seems to persist and is implied by the testimonies of those who leave the country in search of refuge elsewhere.”⁸⁰

61. Another particularity of this division identified by the Special Rapporteur is the application of the policy of “crime by association” which also provides a basis for discrimination: “Political dissent is heavily punished and has an intergenerational impact; where the parents are seen as antithetical to the regime, the child and the rest of the family are also discriminated against in their access to school, hospitals and other necessities.”⁸¹

62. The 2008 reports of the Special Rapporteur to the Human Rights Council and the General Assembly specifically analyse patterns of discrimination that affect development, access to food and other necessities, and particular sectors of society. With reference to the right to food, the Special Rapporteur has stressed that “beyond the elite, the people are faced with a painful paradox: on the one hand, the social safety nets which the State offered in the past are now no longer reliable and they must seek other ways to fend for themselves; on the other hand, when they undertake various livelihood initiatives to supplement their income, the authorities clamp down on them for fear of losing their grip on the population.”⁸²

63. In 2009, the Special Rapporteur dedicated part of his report to the General Assembly to the issue of “freedom from discrimination”. He noted that the discrimination that results from the stratification of society can be seen through the plight of several groups, and that food and other shortages have particularly taken their toll on women, with high malnutrition rates particularly recorded in pregnant women.⁸³

64. The General Assembly resolutions have reflected the concerns raised in these reports. For instance, resolution 66/174 expressed concern at the precarious humanitarian situation which is compounded by the “prevalence of chronic and acute malnutrition, particularly among the most vulnerable groups, pregnant women, infants and the elderly.”⁸⁴

65. In its consideration of the State report of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea in 2005, the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) underscored that there is a difference between de jure and de facto equality between men and women. The Committee noted with concern the persistence of traditional and stereotyped assumptions and attitudes in respect of the roles and responsibilities of women and men, which are discriminatory against women and have a pronounced impact, particularly in the areas of education and employment as well as in other areas of their lives. There is only limited access by women to key decision-making positions at the top, particularly in politics, the judiciary and the civil service. It is also concerned that in times of economic crisis, as in the current situation of the country, women’s prescribed roles and lesser entitlement intensifies their hardship and amounts to compounded discrimination.⁸⁵

66. The concerns of CEDAW have been echoed by the Secretary-General and the Special Rapporteur in all their reports and have been reflected in numerous United Nations resolutions. Several resolutions express deep concern at the “continued violation of the human rights and fundamental freedoms of women, in particular the trafficking of women for prostitution or forced marriage,” as well as forced abortions and gender based discrimination.⁸⁶

67. In 2005, the Commission on Human Rights expressed deep concern about the continued violation of the women’s rights, in particular the trafficking of women for prostitution or forced marriage, ethnically motivated forced abortions, including by labour-inducing injection or natural delivery, as well as infanticide of children of repatriated mothers, including in police detention centres and labour-training camps.”⁸⁷

68. In its 2006 and 2007 resolutions, the General Assembly expressed serious concerns at the “continuing violation of the human rights and fundamental freedoms of women, in particular the trafficking of women for the purpose of prostitution or forced marriage, forced abortions, and infanticide of children of repatriated mothers, including in police detention centres and camps.”⁸⁸

69. Both CEDAW and the Special Rapporteur highlighted the impact that discrimination has on the issue of violence against women.⁸⁹ Both domestic and institutional violence, particularly in prisons and other closed institutions, is widespread in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea. This affects in particular women who do not belong to the ruling elite and who are marginalized by the cloistered political system. As the Special Rapporteur stressed, the Penal Code, amended in 2004, contains certain provisions that deal with sexual violence. However, what is lacking in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea is specific legislation to deal with all forms of violence against women and accompanying prevention and protection measures for victims.⁹⁰

70. The Special Rapporteur has further added that there are prevailing cultural assumptions in the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea that women are dependent on men, and it is expected that women will be obedient and passive. As a result, women are more directly exposed to various types of cultural practices in the family that result in violence towards them. There is also a perception that domestic violence is not a crime and that the State should not intervene in such private family matters. Even when a witness or a victim of domestic violence presents a case of violence to the police, reportedly, it is often not acted upon.⁹¹ The Special Rapporteur also reflects concerns about reports of public security agents and patrols physically assaulting women in marketplaces; but since these agents are Government personnel, victims are not in a position to appropriately report their abuses. In the absence of a proper complaint and accountability mechanism, women continue to be exposed to acts of violence which they have little choice but to endure.⁹²

71. The Secretary General, the Special Rapporteur, and the Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC) noted that the principle of non-discrimination is not fully respected in practice, vis-à-vis children with disabilities, children living in institutions, and children who are in conflict with the law. Moreover, it has been highlighted that children also face discrimination on the basis of political or other opinion, social origin or other status, either of themselves or because of their parents.⁹³ The General Assembly in its 2011 and 2012 resolutions addressed the specific vulnerability of children, in particular the continued lack of access to basic economic, social and cultural rights. These resolutions point to the particular vulnerability of repatriated children, street children, children with disabilities, children whose parents are detained, children living in detention or in institutions or in conflict with the law.⁹⁴ Several United Nations documents also point to discrimination against children of non-ethnic Korean origin and their mothers.⁹⁵

72. As early as 2003 the Commission on Human Rights expressed deep concern at the “mistreatment of and discrimination against disabled children”. Since 2006 the General Assembly has consistently decried “continuing reports of violations of the human rights and fundamental freedoms of persons with disabilities, especially on the use of collective camps and of coercive measures that target the rights of persons with disabilities to decide freely and responsibly on the number and spacing of their children.”⁹⁶ Whereas in 2006 the Special Rapporteur noted “to date, the situation facing those with disabilities has presented a very disconcerting picture. It is reported that those with disabilities are sent away from the capital city, and particularly those with mental disabilities are detained in areas or camps known as ‘Ward 49’ with harsh and subhuman conditions.”⁹⁷

73. Another group regularly referred to by the Special Rapporteur, the Secretary-General and numerous resolutions of the Commission on Human Rights, Human Rights Council and General Assembly are those returned or repatriated to the Democratic People’s Republic Korea and their families. All reports and resolutions refer to the harsh punishments they suffer, the violations of their rights and the lack of respect for the principle of non-refoulement by neighbouring states.

Recommendations on discrimination

74. During the Universal Periodic Review in 2009, several States recommended that the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea ratify the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (ICERD) and the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CPRD).⁹⁸

75. Several Human Rights Council resolutions reaffirm the responsibility of the Government of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea to ensure the full enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms of its entire population.⁹⁹

F. Violations of freedom of expression

76. The United Nations has called upon the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea to respect the right to freedom of opinion, expression and assembly of its citizens.

77. Since 2006, the General Assembly has expressed “its very serious concern at ...all pervasive and severe restrictions on the freedoms of thought, conscience, religion, opinion and expression, peaceful assembly and association, and on equal access to information, by such means as the persecution of individuals exercising their freedom of opinion and expression, and their families.”¹⁰⁰

78. The Commission on Human Rights also echoed its concern about the same reported violations.¹⁰¹

79. With regard to freedom of expression, the Special Rapporteur noted, in 2006, that there was no ostensible improvement during the year. The opaque and non-democratic nature of the State militates against the right to self-determination and the need for democracy in the country. Although the advent of technology and globalization has meant that some Democratic People’s Republic of Korea nationals have more access to foreign information, there is still no genuine free access to information, since media and related information are State-controlled and it is illegal to listen to foreign radio, watch foreign TV or to own computers without official permission.¹⁰²

80. According to information received, in October 2006, the authorities threatened independent radio stations run by exiles and operated from another country. Another source indicates that the local police monitor sales of radios so as to ensure that they are pre-tuned to government stations and are sealed before they go on sale.¹⁰³

81. In 2009, the Special Rapporteur highlighted that the media is heavily controlled and censored, and forms the backbone of an enormous propaganda machine. Reading of books from the Republic of Korea is punishable as a crime of espionage. Chinese books are also prohibited. There is extensive wiretapping of telephones. Unless one belongs to the elite, it is forbidden to own computers and to use the Internet without official permission and it is prohibited to watch foreign videos. There are reports of official clamp-downs on compact discs, and surveillance teams of inspectors raid homes to see whether families are (illegally) watching or listening to foreign films and radio or television broadcasts. Such raids are particularly intense near the border with neighbouring countries. Radio and television sets are pre-tuned to Government programmes. People who were caught listening to foreign broadcasts were detained by the State authorities and sentenced to long prison terms.¹⁰⁴

82. In 2011, the Special Rapporteur underlined that the authorities in the country continue to impose severe restrictions on freedom of opinion, expression and assembly, despite constitutional guarantees of these rights.¹⁰⁵ He stressed that the provisions of the Press Law of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea are not in line with a State party's obligation under article 19 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. Article 48 of the Press Law, for instance, empowers the State to criminalize any statement, publication, news or article that is critical of the State or its organs. Furthermore, article 103 of the Penal Code of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, as amended in 1999, stipulates that anyone seriously disturbing the social order shall be punished with up to 5 years of correctional labour and, in serious cases, their leaders shall be punished with up to 10 years of correctional labour. When the Democratic People's Republic of Korea further amended the Penal Code in April 2004, with the aim of including specific acts that would constitute such crimes, it included listening to broadcasts from the Republic of Korea; collecting, possessing and circulating printed matter from the Republic of Korea; and spreading unfounded rumours.¹⁰⁶

83. In 2011, the Special Rapporteur highlighted the fact that the availability of foreign newspapers to the public is highly restricted with independent national media, and severe restrictions on journalists' travel within the country and abroad. Restrictions placed on journalists and others who seek to exercise their freedom of expression and opinion are incompatible with provisions under paragraph 3 of article 19 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. State-controlled media have also been used to defame independent reporting through allegations attacking the integrity, morals and independence of journalists and media outlets. Complaints have been fabricated to discredit independent non-governmental organizations and journalists.¹⁰⁷

84. The Secretary-General also highlighted that the Government's control over the flow of information is strict and pervasive. The Democratic People's Republic of Korea's state news agency, the Korean Central News Agency, is the only source of information for all media outlets in the country.¹⁰⁸

85. In 2012, the Special Rapporteur underlined that due to ambiguous terms in the Criminal Code of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, the State can impose severe restrictions on the enjoyment of freedom of opinion and expression. For instance, article 166 of the Code refers to punishment of a worker in the communications and broadcasting service sector who makes "irresponsible" communications or does not conduct broadcasting in a "normal manner", resulting in "serious consequences". The use of terms such as "normal manner", "serious consequences" and "irresponsible" leaves scope for the Government to suppress freedom of opinion and expression. It should be noted that the universal right to freedom of expression includes the right to receive and impart information. "Article 195 of the Code provides for punishments, including short-term labour, for a person who listens to broadcasts that are hostile to the Republic or collects, keeps or distributes enemy propaganda, which can be broadly interpreted to restrict people in the exercise of their right to freedom of opinion and expression or to allow the Government to place severe restrictions on independent media in the country."¹⁰⁹

Recommendations on freedom of expression

86. The Secretary-General urged the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to "to take decisive measures to respect the rights to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; assembly; and opinion and expression."¹¹⁰ Furthermore, the Special Rapporteur, in concert with the statements made by the Secretary-General, also noted that "freedom of opinion and expression is an indispensable condition for the full development of society, and the realization of a number of rights. To this end, he calls on the Government to provide greater space for independent media, free access to the Internet."¹¹¹

G. Violations of the right to life

87. Over many years the General Assembly and the Commission on Human Rights have expressed their serious concern at the use of public executions and "imposition of the death penalty for political or religious reasons."¹¹² In 2001, the Human Rights Committee recommended that the Democratic People's Republic of Korea refrain from public executions and work towards abolishing capital punishment.¹¹³

88. In 2008, the Secretary-General informed the General Assembly that although their veracity could not be independently confirmed, "reports from a range of sources continue to cite a high number of public executions."¹¹⁴ The same year the Special Rapporteur noted that he found the continuing use of public executions to intimidate the public particularly disquieting. In his 2009 report to the Human Rights Council he noted reports of public and secret executions in political detention camps. In 2010 in relation to political prisoners, the Special Rapporteur noted that the lives of inmates are lost too easily to hunger and slave labour, brutality and atrocity. There is, however, little detail in United Nations documentation describing instances of death in custody or as a consequence of torture.

89. In relation to capital punishment, the Secretary-General noted in 2011 that the number of offences carrying the death penalty had been reduced from 33 to 5. However, he expressed concern at the fact that, of those five offences, four are essentially political offences (articles 44, 45, 47 and 52 of the Criminal Code) couched in terms so broad that the imposition of the death penalty may be subjective and arbitrary.¹¹⁵

90. Moreover in 2012, the Special Rapporteur highlighted that on 19 December 2007, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea adopted a unique form of law, referred to as an "addendum to the Criminal Code for ordinary crimes," which has gone largely unnoticed by the international community and which expands the "crimes" for which the death penalty is applied. The Special Rapporteur notes that the addendum has functioned as a complement to the Penal Code, and carried the same weight as other provisions of the Criminal Code. The addendum comprises a total of 23 articles, of which 16 stipulate the death penalty for a number of crimes, 14 including smuggling and dealing in narcotics, seizing State property, currency counterfeiting and illicitly selling State resources. With the adoption of the addendum, the total number of crimes that carry the death penalty in the country stands at 22. Furthermore, the addendum contains a number of vague expressions, such as "the gravest cases" or "extremely serious cases," which leave room for arbitrary decisions by the authorities. The addendum permits the application of capital punishment for various crimes as long as the authorities are able to establish that the crime in question was "extremely serious" and falls under one of the 16 listed crimes.¹¹⁶

Recommendations on the right to life

91. The General Assembly and Human Rights Council resolutions have consistently treated public executions and the application of the death penalty for political and religious reasons as a systematic, grave and widespread form of violation of human rights in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

92. The Secretary-General and the Special Rapporteur have reiterated recommendations by the Human Rights Committee that the Democratic People's Republic of Korea end public executions and adopt a moratorium on the death penalty.¹¹⁷

93. In 2011 the Special Rapporteur recommended that the Democratic People's Republic of Korea repeal provisions of law that run counter to international standards, particularly drawing the attention to the provisions of the Criminal code and its addendum.¹¹⁸

H. Violations of freedom of movement

94. The United Nations has consistently addressed reported violations of the right to freedom of movement occurring across the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, as well as of persons who cross or try to cross the border without a permit.

95. Since 2006, the General Assembly has expressed "its very serious concern at ... limitations imposed on every person who wishes to move freely within the country and travel abroad, including the punishment of those who leave or try to leave the country without permission, or their families as well as punishment of persons who are returned and at the “sanctions imposed on citizens of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea who have been repatriated from abroad, such as treating their departure as treason, leading to punishments of internment, torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or the death penalty.”¹¹⁹

96. The Democratic People’s Republic of Korea has always had a strict policy on the movements of its people both internally and externally. Since its inception, the authorities have regulated migration stringently as an instrument of State control. Generally the population is not allowed to move freely within the country and people are only able to travel abroad with official permission.¹²⁰

97. In 2012 the Special Rapporteur summarized how the classification of the population on the basis of their loyalty to the Government affects the enjoyment of human rights, including freedom of movement. He noted that members of the “hostile” class face “the greatest number of restrictions and cannot live in Pyongyang or other major cities.”¹²¹

98. The Special Rapporteur noted that, for years, there has been a constant flow of people persecuted by the authorities fleeing the country clandestinely, without travel permits.¹²² The food crisis of the mid-1990s and thereafter has also led to increased migration of people in search of food and other necessities across the border. There has thus been a persistent flow of people into neighbouring countries at times in search of food, employment and livelihood, at times escaping from persecution and oppression, at times for both reasons.¹²³

99. In 2012 the Special Rapporteur recognized, that while some people flee the country due to persecution, others leave for economic reasons.¹²⁴ However, he noted that whatever their motivation it is necessary to provide all individuals leaving the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea with protection. The Special Rapporteur observed that many of those leaving the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea belong to what the Government considers the “hostile” class. “In such cases, there are strong grounds for arguing that their departure is motivated by political persecution or due to their membership in a particular social group, two of the five conditions established by the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees.”¹²⁵

100. The Special Rapporteur further argues that even if certain persons may not fit the definition of refugee when they leave the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea, because the sole circumstance motivating their movement is economic hardship, they may become refugees sur place – because they have a valid fear of persecution upon return, given that leaving the country without authorization is a criminal offense.¹²⁶

101. In the Democratic People’s republic of Korea, it is a criminal offence for citizens to leave the country without permission. Therefore, punishment facing citizens of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea who have been repatriated from abroad raises serious concern.

102. On 18 November 2005, the Special Rapporteur sent a communication in connection with two groups of the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea nationals who were deported back to their country by a neighbouring country against their will. The first group consisted of five women and two men who were deported on 29 September 2005, after having sought asylum in a foreign school in a neighbouring country. The second case related to a group of four women and one man who also sought asylum in a foreign school in a neighbouring country, who were returned to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea against their will in October 2005. The Special Rapporteur requested the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to provide him with information on the current whereabouts and status of the above-mentioned groups and expressed concern about their safety. He further urged the Government to abstain from punishing the returnees for having left without an exit visa and to ensure their safety. In its reply, the Government reiterated its position that it did not recognize the mandate of the Special Rapporteur and therefore did not wish to meet or communicate with the Special Rapporteur regarding human rights issues.¹²⁷

103. Several persons interviewed by the Special Rapporteur have had experience with forced return to the country of origin and the punishments inflicted. If those who had left the country were "first-timers" without political affiliations, they would be questioned upon return without necessarily being punished. If they had left several times and subsequently returned, punishments would be increased accordingly, beginning with re-education and forced labour. If they had had access to religious groups or non-governmental organizations in neighbouring countries, they would be punished severely, with long-term incarceration in political prisons for those seen as being antithetical to the regime in the country of origin.¹²⁸

104. The Special Rapporteur noted in his 2007 report that during certain periods, there has been a slight relaxation of the control imposed on migrants. Article 233 of the revised 2004 Penal Code defines 'border crossing' broadly as 'those going and coming across the border' instead of 'simple crossing' in the old Penal Code. Furthermore, the level of the mandatory sentence for the crime of 'illegal going and coming across the border' was reduced from three years to two years of 'labour training' punishment. Since two years of 'labour training' is equivalent to one year of 'correctional labour', the level of punishment was reduced from three years to one year of 'correctional labour.'¹²⁹

105. However, the threat of punishment facing the repatriated citizens is ever-present. In March 2008, the Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions together with the special Rapporteur on the right to food and the Special Rapporteur on the question of torture, sent a joint allegation letter regarding information received on the alleged public execution of 13 women and 2 men, who were reportedly accused of planning to cross over to a neighbouring country. It was alleged that this execution was designed to dissuade people from crossing illegally. The Government did not reply to this communication.¹³⁰

106. In each of his reports to the General Assembly the Secretary-General notes the concerns of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) relating to the flow of Democratic People's Republic of Korea nationals seeking protection, including reports that women are being subjected to human trafficking and forced marriages and in some instances children born in such conditions have been deprived of the care of their mothers.¹³¹

Recommendations on freedom of movement

107. Since 2005, the Special Rapporteur has called upon the Government to address the root causes of displacement, prevent persecution and victimization of those who are displaced, including when they return to their country of origin, and guarantee the right to freedom of movement without imposing sanctions on those who move without permission.¹³²

108. The General Assembly called upon the Government to ensure that citizens of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea expelled or returned to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea are able to "return in safety and dignity, are humanely treated and are not subjected to any kind of punishment."¹³³

109. As the Special Rapporteur underlined in 2007, "the preferred position is that those who left the country in search of refuge elsewhere should not be punished at all for having left the country without an exit visa. This would also help to fulfil the spirit of the country's 1998 Constitution whose article 75 states that "citizens shall have freedom of residence and travel."¹³⁴

I. Enforced disappearances, including abduction of foreign nationals

110. The United Nations, through many of its human rights mechanisms, has consistently documented and decried the crime of enforced disappearances in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. Reports by the Secretary-General and the Special Rapporteur highlight the presence of long-existing cases of enforced disappearances, particularly in the form of abduction of foreign nationals, dating back to the Korean War. Since 2003, the Commission on Human Rights, followed by the Human Rights Council have repeatedly noted the existence and unresolved nature of the abduction of foreign nationals in each of their resolutions concerning North Korea. In a comprehensive list of widespread, systematic and grave human rights violations, the General Assembly's first resolution on North Korea in December 2005 (and those that followed) expressed its concern at the "unresolved questions relating to the abduction of foreigners in the form of enforced disappearance."¹³⁵ From 2006 onwards the General Assembly qualified these abductions noting that they violated "the human rights of the nationals of other sovereign countries."¹³⁶

111. The Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances (WGEID) was the first United Nations mechanism to address the issue of abduction of foreigners by the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, in particular cases of Japanese and Korean nationals. In total the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances has transmitted twelve cases to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, all of which remain outstanding.¹³⁷ In addition to eight cases of disappeared Japanese nationals abducted in the 1970s and 1980s, another case of disappearance of a female national of the Republic of Korea on the border between China and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea was reported to have occurred in 2004. The remaining three cases were received by the WGEID during its November 2010-2011 reporting period and concern Korean nationals who allegedly disappeared on December 1969 after their Korean

Airlines flight YS-11 was hijacked and diverted to Democratic People's Republic of Korea.¹³⁸

112. Regarding the cases of abduction of Japanese nationals, the government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea responded to the WGEID by stating that it "had already provided the Government of Japan with detailed information on those persons."¹³⁹ In regards to the female national of South Korea, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea stated that after conducting an investigation into the matter, they had found that "neither that incident nor any similar act had occurred in the border area."¹⁴⁰ The WGEID responded that, because of unsatisfactory reports from the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, these cases would remain outstanding and hoped that the Democratic People's Republic of Korea would clarify them.¹⁴¹

113. The greatest number of enforced disappearances possibly happened during and after the Korean War, which took place from 1950-1953. In his 2011 report to the Human Rights Council, the Special Rapporteur noted that the exact number of persons from the Republic of Korea by the Democratic People's Republic of Korea during the Korean War is not known.¹⁴² However he noted that in March 2002, the Korean War Abductees Family Union (KWAFU) began compiling the existing "List of Korean War Abducted Persons." The list contains around 94,700 names of people abducted. As the Special Rapporteur noted in his report, "some 80.3 per cent of those abducted were either taken away from their home or near their homes, which indicates that these abductions were "carried out intentionally and in an organized manner".¹⁴³

114. The Special Rapporteur noted that since the war, 3,824 people have been reportedly abducted from the Republic of Korea, of which 3,310 have been returned after having been held for 6 months to a year. He has gathered information that an estimated 500 civilians abducted and 500 prisoners of war are currently being detained in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, which denies the existence of such abductees. Countries such as Japan, Lebanon, and Thailand have reported such abductions. The Special Rapporteur noted that of 17 identified abductees from Japan only 5 have been returned, with 12 cases still pending (some of which are being examined by the Working Group on Enforced and Involuntary Disappearances).¹⁴⁴ In relation to the abduction issue the Special Rapporteur argues that "international criminal liability of those responsible for abduction cannot be ruled out (emphasis added)."¹⁴⁵

115. As documented by the WGEID, the Secretary-General and the Special Rapporteur, the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea has failed to investigate enforced disappearances sufficiently, transparently, or independently, resulting in unsatisfactory results that have not clarified the cases of abducted persons.

Recommendations on enforced disappearances

116. In its resolutions, the General Assembly has repeatedly called on the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to "urgently resolve these questions, including through existing channels in a transparent manner."¹⁴⁶ However, reiterated calls for the return of abductees by the Secretary-General, the Special Rapporteur and the General Assembly have been ignored by the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.¹⁴⁷
